Paid character transfer wow

WoW Classic finally has paid character transfers. They'll cost you $25 just like they did 12 years ago, as just like they do in the live game today. Although the Blizzard Store Page hasn't updated yet, Wowhead confirmed that the transfers work via the in-game option. If you have a PVP character, you can stay with the PVP ruleset or move them to PVE and RP realms, but neither PVE nor RP characters can be transferred to a PVP realm. In this old GameSpot article from 2006, Blizzard's Shane Dabiri explained the reason for this restriction well. The limitation is to prevent you from leveling up your character on a PVE realm without the dangers of enemy players, then transfer to a PVP realm when it's time to camp lowbies at Nesingwary's Expedition. It's made to conserve the experience and to make you have to fully commit to PVP from the ground up. Aside from that, your character must have been logged into recently and they must be at least level 10. From levels 1 – 30 you can only bring over up to 100 gold. At levels 31 – 50, it's 500 gold. At 51 – 60, it's 2000 gold. There's also a 90-day cooldown on how often you can transfer characters. This is the first time since the game's launch that players have been able to move to realms without the benefit of a free realm transfer for high and low populations. With the removal of layering, this change could start fluctuating realm populations in the future. It'll surely be a fascinating thing to keep an eye on as the game nears its completion. Not only are there big releases coming up like Ahn'Qiraj, there are also only so many phases left to be released. There might be a considerable drop in players once there's no more content left. For now though, if you've been waiting to join your friends or you have a sudden itch to join a new server, you can finally do that. Choose carefully though — you'll be stuck there during the game's upcoming Phase 3 launch. You don't want to be caught taking a trip to Darkmoon Faire without any friends, do you? World of Warcraft allows you to design your own custom game characters. You can transfer your favorite WoW character to another server (commonly called a "realm") if it has been over 90 days since the realm was launched. Transferring a character to another server requires paying a transfer fee to Blizzard. As of June 2012, this fee is $25 per character. Tax is added to the fee if you live in certain states such as Texas or New Mexico. Updated: 3 weeks ago Article ID: 83440 The Character Transfer is a paid service. Earlier this month, Blizzard released WoW Classic patch 1.13.3 which unlocked the WSG and AV battlegrounds. Burried in the patch notes however, was the reference to support for future paid character transfers. Fast forward one week and Blizzard has now enabled the service for those looking to transfer their character to a different server within their region. Available for $25/€25 (the same price as paid transfers on the retail Battle for Azeroth realms) the service does come with some limitations, which we've included below. The Character Transfer service allows you to move characters to other realms, different World of Warcraft accounts, or from one Blizzard account to another. You can purchase a Character Transfer in the World of Warcraft in-game shop. Each type of transfer has a shared three-day cooldown. WoW Classic character transfers have a three-month cooldown. This service takes up to 24 hours to complete. If you log in before the transfer is complete, it may fail and your character will be locked. Be sure to read these before you choose to purchase the character transfer. Each transfer has a ninety-day cooldown. Gold transfer limits specific level ranges are as follows: Level 1-30 can transfer with up to 100 gold Level 31-50 can transfer with up to 500 gold Level 51-60 can transfer with up to 2000 gold Characters cannot transfer from PvE realms to PvP Realms and RP realms cannot transfer to RP-PvP realms. WoW Classic, Blizzard's vanilla server option for World of Warcraft, is available globally now. The game was released back in August of this year. While not being able to server transfer initially lent credence to the whole authentic feel of World of Warcraft: Classic, it had to come eventually. The fact is WoW Classic demands a ton of time from players, so being able to transfer and spend time with friends is paramount to the longevity of the game. You can do that as of this week, but there are provisos.First, there's a 90-day cooldown on transfers, so be sure you want to do it before you pull the trigger. There's also a gold limit that is linked to your player level (1-30 can only take 100 gold, 31-50 can take 500 gold and 51-60 can take 2000 gold). This is done to deter gold farming, and will only impact the most hardcore players as that's a decent chunk of change for a casual fan. You also can't transfer from PVE realms to PVP or from RP to RP-PVP.Oh, and it costs money, just like the live version of the game! It's $25 per character, per move. Again, make sure you're 100% comfortable before you do it. That fee stings a lot less if you take into account all of the free transfers for populated realms that Blizzard has granted players in the past.WoW Classic: Paid Character Transfers Now Available [Battle.net] Filed under... #Blizzard#World of Warcraft#World of Warcraft Classic The developers from Blizzard have taken to the official World of Warcraft site to share a new blog post announcing that WoW Classic paid character transfers are now available to players, allowing them to relocate characters to a different realm within the region.
