B2.2. Why do we take risks? (BBC 6-minute English)

Fill in the gaps

Note: This is not a partial transcript. Words appear in the right order.

Alice
Do you? I didn't know you had a phobia – and that means a strong and _____ fear of something.

Finn
Well, I don't think this is a phobia because it isn't unreasonable. Flying thousands of feet up in the sky in a _____, you know, that's not safe!

Alice
Flying is safer than you think, Finn. It's much riskier to drive or cycle to work. And, actually, risk taking is the subject of today's show! Risk means the chances of something bad happening. For example, did you know that your chance of being _____ your bicycle and killed during a one-mile journey is the same as your chances of winning the lottery?

Alice OK. So we'll find out later if you're right or wrong later on. Now let's listen to Andreas Wilkey, a psychologist at Clarkson University in New York, talking about why we're bad at _____ risk.

INSERT Andreas Wilkey, Psychologist, Clarkson University, Potsdam, New York
People typically fear anything which is small probability but it's _____ if it were to happen.... Think about dying in a plane crash, think about a nuclear meltdown from the nearby _____. Recently we have another increase in these birds' virus _____ in South Korea. People read about that. And they may pay a lot of attention to that in the news but they may forget to get their flu shot.

Alice
And it's often because of media coverage – for example, watching the news and reading the newspapers – that it can be difficult for us to understand how likely certain things are to happen. Catastrophic events feel like very real _____, while we tend to forget about the small but _____ risks that become more likely over time.

Finn
People who enjoy extreme sports actually seek out danger – it gives them extreme _____. So let's listen to Karina Hollekim from Norway. She's a base jumper – that's a person with a _____, who leaps from tall buildings or cliffs – and she's talking about what she feels about risk.

Alice
Yes. It must be a magical feeling to step off a _____, mustn't it, Finn?

Alice
Yes. The odds are actually 1 in 14 million. You are as _____ to win the national lottery from a single ticket as you are to be knocked off your bicycle and killed during a _____.

Time capsules

NB: This is not a word-for-word transcript

Rob
Hello, I'm Rob. Welcome to 6 Minute English. I'm joined today, at the start of a brand new year, by Neil.

Neil
Hello, Rob! I'm really looking forward to 2015, but I have to say that last year was great. So great I'm thinking about creating my own time capsule.

Rob
Really? A time capsule? You mean a kind of box or container where you can store objects and information so that people in the future – yourself included – will know how we lived at this particular time?

Neil
That's it! And I'm already collecting items. My old mobile phone which I don't use anymore. And a woolly jumper with a snowman on it my granny gave me that I never wear...

Rob
You never wear?

Neil
It's a pretty silly jumper, Rob. She said it's to remind me of how much she loves me. Remind, which means, makes me remember – but all it makes me think of is that she still treats me like a child! I'll include the Christmas card which came with it!

Rob
Well, you've got to choose the items you wish to keep as a memory of our time very carefully. It's a historical record – that usually means a piece of writing or a narrative of events at a particular time. Well, let's discuss time capsules and vocabulary related to memory. But first, a question to test your knowledge of time capsules. The International Time Capsule Society is based at Oglethorpe University in Atlanta, in the US, and it studies these artefacts. According to this organisation, how many time capsules are estimated to exist in the world today? Is it:
