STATIC OR DYNAMIC VERBS

A static (or state verb) verb is a verb describing a state or of being. Something about the same. State verbs express things like being or having feelings, beliefs, existence and being.
Example: David really loves his new shoes. (In this sentence David is not doing anything, he's having something like in a state or static verb.)
State verbs are usually not used in the progressive tenses.
Example: I am thinking about to go. (Incorrect)
(I was where to go. (Correct))

Dynamic verbs are the opposite of static verbs. They express a real action.
Example: The duck quickly swims across the pond.

Directions: Identify whether the underlined verb in each sentence is a static or dynamic verb. Write it static or dynamic next to the line provided.
