In your opinion you think according to you and according to you The Authority of Temporal Power Comes from the Same Source. And from the same origin, according to her, the legitimacy of temporal power also descends. No results found for this meaning. Frequent words: 1-300, 301-600, 601-900 Frequent short expression: 1-400, 401-800, 801-1200Expressions Frequent: 1-400, 401-800, 801-1200 "According to You" Sounds Very combative , Where "in your opinion" is Less SO. "According to you, x is true?" Sounds Like The Speaker is Arguing That X is not true, and they are mocking Someone for Claiming It IS. "In your opinion, X IS True?" Sounds Like The Speaker is Simply Asking for Someone's Opinion and Not Indication Whether They Might Agree With it. This Could Still Be Combative IF The Speaker Is Trying To Trick Someone Into Admitting An Opinion (in Order To Disagree). But it Could Be Simply Inquiring. "In your opinion, Should We use The Blue or the Green Paint?" is in Most Contexts An Honest Request for Advice. Both of These Phrases can be used as entire statements. If A Doubtful claim is made, "According to you" AS a Rebuttal Means That The Claim Is Made Only With The Doubtful Expertise And / Or Honesty of The One Who Made The Claim. "In Your opinion" Is A Far Politever Statement That The Claim Made Is Just An opinion. It May Be Meant As Direct Contradiction Or to Establish The possibility of debate, defending on context. Hi, Are These Sentences Correct: -Cording to Him, People Aren't Allowed To Make Noise -According To You, What is their Problem? - According to me, I'm Not Sure to Be Able to Do That. (Not Sure Here) Many Thanks Hello Valskyfrance, Please Explain to US THE CONTEXT OR THE POINT OF GRAMMAR THAT YOU ARE CONCERNED ABOUT. Do The Sentences Look Correct To You? WHY OR WHY NOT? In My opinion, whenever you use "according to x", x is usually regarded to the other but not yourself. Hello Valskyfrance, Please Explain to US The Context Or The Point of Grammar That You Are Concerned About. Do The Sentences Look Correct To You? WHY OR WHY NOT? Well. In Fact My Problem Is About "According to me". Is It Correct? Can I use "According to You", "According to Them" ... at the end of a sentence or always at the begining? The Young Are Always Bad-Educated According To You. According to me (for my part), I do not agree with you. Hi thanks valskyfrance I suggest you avoid "according to me." I would not say it Unless I was being facetious. I certainly would not use it as an alternative to "for my part" or "in my opinion". Here's a previous thread on the subject. You can use "according to X" either at the beginning or at the end of a sentence. Looking at your sentences: -According to him, people are not allowed to make noise if you insert something before noise eg 'a lot of' -According to What's their problem? Maybe. If you're asking a question, I normally expect "in your vision/opinion" rather than "in your opinion" - in my opinion, I'm not sure I can do that. Young people are always rude, according to you. (but I think you mean "given up" rather than "badly educated") In my opinion (for my part), I disagree with you. There are actually quite a few previous threads on 'second': you can find it by putting second in Look-up dictionary and choosing the English definition dictionary. Hello valskyfrance I suggest you avoid "in my opinion." I wouldn't say it unless I was face to face: I certainly wouldn't use it as an alternative to "from my side" or "in my opinion." Here is a previous thread on the subject. You can use "according to X" at the beginning or at the end of a sentence. Looking at your phrases: There are actually quite a few previous threads on 'second': you can find them by putting second in Look-up dictionary and choosing the English definition dictionary. Very helpful Thank you very much. Image not available byColor: Sorry, this entry is not available in Image not available To view this video download the Flash Player What happens to us when we die? This is a question that has exercised the most beautiful minds of mankind since those humans have been around to have them â and has recently been the subject of a number of groundbreaking scientific studies. Now, a Reddit thread asked the question specifically to those who were clinically dead and then resuscitated, and received hundreds of responses. Although the truthfulness of the answers must be taken with a little pinch of salt, the answers from what essentially matters to a large investigation on the subject can be divided into three categories. There are those who felt nothing; those who had an experience of light and some interaction with another person/being; and those who felt that they could watch what was happening while they were "dead" and could not do anything. The first group closely matches the responses of a single Redditor who has officially died twice and recently invited questions on the subject from other users. The latter group, meanwhile, seems to agree with the work of Dr. Sam Parnia, who looked at patients with cardiac arrest and found that almost 40% described having some form of "awareness" at a time when they were clinically dead. Here's a taster of some of the responses from Reddit users â who don't seem to have produced consensus on the issue just yet. "I was getting an angiogram done, wide awake looking at the screen and talking to the doctor. The alarms started to go down and everyone panicked. My world became soft and black and everything vanished into black. The next thing I remember was opening my eyes and hearing a doctor say, "We got it back." It was a peaceful feeling more than anything." "One day I collapsed during a class presentation. All breathing and blood circulation I felt like you're falling into an endless hole while my peers screamed help. I was resuscitated and I still have no memory of the short time before and after my death ". I haven't seen anything, just like sleeping without dreamsâ € â € . My last memory goes back at about one hour before the accident, and the next memory dates back to two days later, when I left a drug-induced coma "Â €. I lost about 40 seconds. It was like falling asleep without dreams, no sense of â € œ. It was really the most strange thing I've ever tried. It could be a dream, but I saw my unconscious body, completely flattened, in the ambulance. I remember the paramedic that was in ambulance with me (which I have not seen before fainting) had green mint hair and I could not remember his name, but I asked him when I resumed knowledge about three days later, "Â .Ire in front of a giant light wall. He extended up, down, right and left, as far as I could see. A bit like putting my eyes 6 inches from a fluorescent light bulb. The next memory is to have woken up in the hospital. "I'll stand somewhere. There was a fog all around me, and I saw my best friend (who had quarreled with me and had stopped talking to me). He told me that I could not go there yet, that I had to continue to try, and that if I promised not to give up, he would revise me on earth. I would accept without words, and I was immediately pushed (in the?) My body "Â €. / others in ambulancesâ € â € > No white lights, no dead relative, no one who told me to go back, but I could see things in any way visible from where my body was. I remember talking about and being angry because no one answered me. My mother told me â € <You didn't say anything, you were dead> Â »I haven't seen anything. Black, empty for a long time, but I had the feeling that everything goes great and that there was nothing wrong. Imagine how to feel the pre-existence, more or less the same as proxinessâ € . to you usâ € € . " m difficult, difficult to please, forever change my mind.
